[Peri-renal retroperitoneal hematoma following a urological intervention. A case report and review of the literature]. During the last years, the incidence of peri-renal retro-peritoneal hematomas (PRPH) following urological surgery, mainly due to a penile perforation during a circumcision, has been increasing among children. We report a PRPH in a child occurring during retrograde ureteroscopy and review the physiopathology and the diagnostic and therapeutic approaches to this potentially serious complication. Characterization of in vitro heme oxygenase induction by copper, zinc, and cadmium in cultured normal human epidermal keratinocytes. Heme oxygenase-1 (HO-1) is inducible by a wide variety of cellular stresses. Induction of HO-1 has been implicated in the mechanism of action of several dietary antioxidants. In the present study, the authors investigated the induction of HO-1 by metals in cultured normal human epidermal keratinocytes (NHEK) to shed light on the possible mechanism of action of the trace metal antioxidants zinc and cadmium. Exposure of NHEK to the trivalent metal ions copper and zinc, but not the tetravalent metal ions cadmium or nickel, elicited HO-1 induction. The amounts of both 2- and 3-fold induction of HO-1 protein were detected by Western blot analysis 24 hr after metal exposure. The optimum time frame of HO-1 induction was 12 to 24 hr. HO-1 induction by metals was independent of NHEK proliferation. Treatment of NHEK with hemein, a known inducer of HO-1, or with a heme-binding mutant of heme oxygenase, did not affect HO-1 induction by copper or zinc, suggesting the absence of a role for free heme in HO-1 induction by copper or zinc. Perturbation of oxidative status by copper or zinc did not appear to be involved in HO-1 induction. Pretreatment of NHEK with cycloheximide or actinomycin D did not affect HO-1 induction by copper or zinc. Pretreatment of NHEK with an antioxidant, such as N-acetylcysteine, 2,2,5,7,8-pentamethyl-6-chromanol, or N-acetylcysteine, showed little or no effect on HO-1 induction

I'm 35, my wife and I are just coming back from our first international trip. We bought a 2006 Ford Fiesta ST on the 14th of December 2005 after spending the previous night with my son. He is 3 years old now, and well, that was a good thing. Fun and games and being a family means a lot to me. So it was the right time to buy a car so he can ride with me, since I was traveling to the States that year too. We had it here for a good 4 years before we decided to sell it in November of last year, just before Thanksgiving. It's crazy because it passed so many times, and it's still going strong. It's now at my neighbor's place, safe and sound. I'm the original owner of this lovely car! Ford invited me to be part of their "Young Owners" program back in 2006 when I bought it, so I am very proud to say that I am one of them! I wanted to take a picture to show the others that i am still part of it. I chose that number because it's the year and it's also the first letter of my name. I picked it out of the 50s. I think it looks great, and it's very hard not to like it. It had no problems whatsoever for those 4 years I had it. I even took it to dealership's and offered them much more money, but I guess it was not the right car for them. The only thing was that the car was starting to show some signs of ageing. But at least it looks good today! It was originally a bit green but it passed the inspection and also the owner had it checked in any way, so it's in perfect condition. The car can be very fast in the right atmosphere. It's really fun. Even if the suspension is quite rough, it will be fun. And it's also fun if you drive it slightly under or over the limit. I would recommend it for
