The result is a Crayola for your blowhole. The park's website (www.Northcoast.org) promises to put visitors "right in the middle of the action" while allowing them to "watch the sea calve, have the air cleaned by its blows and listen to the stories told by the resident sea lions and sea otters." "It's pretty cool," says park manager Joe O'Hara. "It's all about the first time they see it." But the
