"We had a warm-up gig in Milwaukee, and I don't know if he was even sober, but he walked in the stage door at the end of the set and said, 'You know what, I think you guys have got to have a beer.' This was at the time [at the end of 1985] when they only served beer in the U.S., so it was a real novelty, and the crowd went nuts. I swear he goes into the tavern before he goes on stage, and he had us bring the next beer to him on stage. We just froze and stared at him, and after he started drinking and didn't even hit his mark, one of us had to go to the back of the stage and shout him and the rest of the band down. And we played a warm-up gig in Milwaukee, in front of a tavern, and after the set started we went to a bar and bought bottles of beer and brought them backstage. That became our thing." 8. "We always played with the light on us, and we were lucky if the shows went that long. You're relying on somebody to keep their strength and their focus. It would be hard to play a show that went five hours or six hours." 9. "We had a label in the '80s called Eclectik, and they put out a cassette tape entitled 'The Concept of Anarchy.' They had a picture of the girls in the front, and a few of the songs we did, but they didn't bother to include any of the bands from the 'wrong side of the tracks' that were on the tape. So we decided that we'd take out those songs and put some of the ska songs on. I sent them the CD, and when they finally came out with it I think they put out 10 or 12
