2. Install Google Earth Engine extension. 3. First start the plugin To do this, press ALT+F12, and then type in "Display: Render". Select the plugin, press the Enter key and then click the Render button. You should see a preview of your model as it's rendered. When the software is finished rendering you can view it through the Mesh Dataset widget. Select a region to display the model. The mesh appears as a drop-down menu. The model is displayed as a mesh using a bounding box that defines the areas of the scene that are visible. You can also display the model using a bird's eye view. In a bird's eye view, the mesh is shown as a 3D object that's similar to a globe. You can rotate the globe to view the model from different angles. You can zoom in to observe more detail, or zoom out to see the entire model. How to use the plugin Most of the actions can be performed directly from the Mesh Dataset. You can change the style of the mesh to change the look of the model. You can transform the mesh by dragging its edges. You can merge the mesh into another mesh. You can export the mesh as a ZIP file. Press ALT+F12, and then type in "File: Export Mesh". Select the mesh. Press the Export Mesh button. The mesh is saved as an editable.kml file. Press ALT+F12, and then type in "File: Export Mesh". Select the mesh. Press the Export Mesh button. The mesh is saved as an editable.kml file. From here you can download the mesh to import into any Autodesk product. Where
