Definitely a different kind of puzzle, it's a jigsaw which is pixel based with pixel blocks. The first time you do a puzzle it's very puzzling to see how the pieces fit together, but the more you play the puzzle, the easier it gets. The interesting aspect of this game is that you have to connect together the blocks and the graphics are very clear and the pieces are very, very tiny. There is a help mode that allows you to input how to connect together the puzzle. Game "Near Star 3D - Jigsaw Puzzle Game" Gameplay: It's more of a 3D puzzle which actually matches the overall theme. The graphics are well presented with 3D effects and the the jigsaw pieces are so tiny that you can see the entire picture even when you're in the middle of your puzzle. You can use the mouse as your weapon and the game is very challenging when you try to connect as many pieces together as possible. There is also a training mode where you can do 10 puzzles with a variety of difficulty levels. Get to nearest star to save, the beginning seems to have lots of problems, such as there is no instructions at the start, the game seems to work too slow and you can only play at two difficulty settings. I think this jigsaw puzzle is a bit like button mashing.... not really. The key is to keep your mouse pointed at the puzzle as you use the left mouse button. You will initially be confused about how to match the pieces together, but with practice and patience you will soon be reaping the rewards. The follow up to the hugely acclaimed Newton's Puzzle is now available on Steam! Take a break from the grind and step into the world of Newton. Do you have the skills to match the 3D blocks which rotate and move in 3 dimensions and move block to block? Can you connect the worlds and save the lives in the universe? EDIT I just made a small mod of my own which makes it possible for you to quickly type in a Maou's name to make it automatically change, so we (me, Nia, and Armor) can just change Maou's name from Maou and her NPC name from Moou.
