This means that players will be able to see exactly what they're shooting, even if they're not actually controlling it. While the game won't be using a motion sensor as a third party, the system should make it much easier to acquire kills with a first person view. The action in Shadow of Mordor will mostly come from an almost third person camera angle, with a limited number of sections where the game will likely shift into b7e8fdf5c8
