But, what happens when there is a need to maintain direct connectivity between computers through a direct cable connection? For that, you need to use KVM switches which are basically hardware -based software. These switches use software to monitor physical connections such as RS-232, USB, FireWire, IEEE 1394 etc. You can change physical connection to a virtual one and transfer the data as if it were to a separate computer. With such a switch, you can have a direct connection between two computers and you don't have to go to great lengths. It also allows the transfer of data between computers even if there are time constraints involved. You can have a simple PC/Mac shared even when both of them are not in the same room.
