The digital information revolution is approaching its 25th birthday. In 1984, an older person would have told you that Apple II and Atari 800 computers, along with their Commodore VIC-20, PET, and TI-99 compatibles rivals, were in their prime. The growth of the Internet, disk-drive drives, and the World Wide Web was beginning to hit its stride. AOL was five years away, and Microsoft's Linux.com was off to a rough start. In 1984, Bill Gates was the Bill Gates of the computer world. In 2018, Google is Microsoft's closest competitor. Twenty-five years ago, information was shared and exchanged in shops and libraries. People purchased a book or magazine to read, but digital information could be shared and exchanged with other people on the Internet. People began to share news articles, serialized TV dramas, videos, and songs. People began to make personal Web pages, upload pictures and videos of themselves and their relatives to share, and watch each other's online videos on their television, using the webcams built into their web browsers. Some of these pioneers continue to drive the Internet revolution today. The world is dominated by smart phones and tablets, which created a new generation of digital media. Other people and companies are trying to use the latest advances in AI to build products that work better and connect people better. We are ready for the coming digital revolution. We've already seen the potential. What's next? We don't know exactly. But it's coming. However, now is a time when we must ask ourselves, as people who live in a digital information age, how digital information is changing our lives. Many of us do not understand the powerful global phenomena that is driving the digital information revolution. For example, I started learning about the impact of digital information in the eighties, during the early years of the commercial Internet, when Compuserve was the most popular network for email and the first search engine was B.G. Wilder's Alta Vista. I remember the

As a vector space Z_q over the field Z_p we have the following: let be $G = \langle g_1, g_2, \dots, g_n \rangle$ a finite group of order pq . We can construct a subspace V of Z_q as follows: the g_i 's form a basis of Z_q , by definition $\langle g_i \rangle = \langle g_i \rangle$. I want to prove (or at least show) that V is a vector space over Z_p and that this space is a direct sum of Z_p and of Z_q . I know that G is generated by the elements g_i (so $G = \langle g_i \rangle$)
