"The light of the White Mage is pure and clean like a nobel, its purity cannot be lost or stained, its shape is stationary." The Alchemist The Black Mage will ask you "Hey, Did you close the hole that had been created by the forbidden magic?" "No." "It was wrong. The forbidden magic that was once sealed out had slipped through and has surfaced." "That is why I have come." "The forbidden magic that is sealed should not be able to emerge. My master's spirit that is inside the sealed forbidden magic should not be affected, but with the White Mage, their mysterious purity of soul can be lost or stained. That is why the White Mage is called the 'healer of darkness.'" "You have the Blood Moon, this is more than enough. Even if you consume this person, the forbidden magic will not be able to come out. This divine power is extremely useful." The Black Mage put her hand on the Sacred Cube. The Black Mage asked the Black Mage standing before her "What is the name of this person?" "Their name is 'White Mage.' But I already know that this name is false, this person is not a White Mage." "Ohh..." She was finally satisfied. Thinking that this person was a false White Mage, she took out her magic orb and sealed it. A message from the Black Mage's Master that appeared in front of her Master appeared in front of her. "My master, we are making progress." "But we are in constant danger. Our numbers are quickly shrinking." "Our enemy has also finally found a White Mage. His time to power up is coming."

Ask HN: What fraction of startups do you think are doomed? - hoare In a thread about funding, Chris Guillebeau mentioned in response to the discussion that maybe 1/3 or 1/4 of startups get funding. Would be interested to know what fraction of startups do you think will close down, fail to find customers, and suffer otherwise? ===== benatkin I wrote a survey on this in the gmail group and got answers like this: Can't beat someone spending $10-20k to put up a survey: Me: Why would they lose money? They'd be paying for traffic. Anon: Preparation... the main one is that they can be learning experience for the founders and/or staff. c9d1549cdd

World of Conquerors has three playable races, the human races the Elves and the Orc race. Each race has it's unique style and set of units. Human: Humans are balanced in-terms of both their offensive and defensive powers. However, they are great collectors and traders. Elves: Elves are great defenders and collectors of knowledge. They also make the best archers in the game, and their Archery special abilities are awesome. Orcs: Orc warriors and infantry are the most offensive army in the game. However, their advantages are overshadowed by their lack of defensive capabilities. Construct cities, manage resources, train soldiers and fight for supremacy in a vast world with other player controlled empires. In World Of Conquerors, the game world is composed of hundreds of thousands of pixels, and each pixel is filled with different type of terrain or buildings like rivers, grass, trees, mountains, lakes and cities. Construct your own city or visit the cities of other empires or Alliance members to fight and claim their resources. There are many opportunities to level up your cities and build your armies. In the game, your cities and armies are represented by units. You will be able to select your strategy in taking your enemies on the battlefield, and you can attack enemy cities and eliminate their units, which will result in a loss of resources for the enemy. Moreover, your city will have an AOE radius for attacking other cities, and you will be able to use your archers to damage the enemy's troops. In battles, you can take on units (or a large number of units) that represent the enemies' army. You can attack enemy units by yourself or by using your allied troops. There are three options in battles, and they are Attack Only, Attack and Defend and Defend Only. The attack is automatically selected when you drag and drop the units to battle, and the other two options are for when your attack does not meet the enemy's defense line. For example, if you hold Alt and drag and drop an enemy commander from your units to the map, it is automatically selected for battle. However, if you hold Ctrl and drag and drop an enemy commander from your units to the map, it will choose Attack and Defend and if you hold Shift it will choose Defend Only. Once you defeat the enemy unit, you will receive some amount of resources and experience as a reward for a win. You will be able to increase your level by studying technologies for research points, and you will also

The Adventures of Mark Nelson is a tile game which had a successful Kickstarter campaign where it was shown to be a highly creative, unique game that anyone can play in under 15 minutes. "The Adventures of Mark Nelson" may be the simplest tile game to use - but it is clever, fun and robust. "The Adventures of Mark Nelson" use a special tile box which allows you to create more intricate movements than would otherwise be possible. It is the only tile game where the game features "played" tiles, which are drawn from a standard deck of playing cards. This way you can use most of the game as a sequence in which many different looking tile sets are played out. This removes the need to make many sets of matching tile cards and allows the game to be quicker and easier to play. The theme of "The Adventures of Mark Nelson" is a boy with a balloon who travels all over the world. The game is played using boxes where you play many of the various locations that Mark Nelson can visit. He can go into trees, to a pond, to the beach, on a train, a plane, a bus, or a boat. You can be a balloon, or Mark Nelson can be in a balloon. The rules are minimal. Each player has a character sheet (which is not illustrated) which is used to keep track of the round of the game. It is the player's job to provide the game with a map (which is also not illustrated), which represents the locations that Mark Nelson can visit. Each box on Mark Nelson's map is a character in the game. The game may be played with two to eight players, so there is a game for everyone at your table. How to Play: Players are free to choose where on Mark Nelson's map they begin. Everyone begins with 4 Supply cards, which are common to every player. Each player draws a "mark". The location of Mark Nelson's map is created by connecting each of the mark cards to a location on the map. The player draws a card with a number. That number represents a Supply card to use. The Supply cards are in numerical order, so you'll use
