In particular, this proposal will test the hypothesis that cdk5 is required for the persistent activity of nerve growth factor in a cell type-specific and regulated manner. Nerve growth factor is a potent trophic factor for promoting the regeneration of myelin-forming cells such as Schwann cells and oligodendrocytes after nerve injury. In recent years it has become increasingly clear that the actin cytoskeleton is an important regulator of nerve growth factor signaling. In the first part of this proposal, we will map the molecular interactions between cdk5, nerve growth factor and the actin cytoskeleton to identify the crucial domains and residues required for nerve growth factor-induced cell survival and/or differentiation. In the second part of this proposal, we will develop an assay for the initiation of nerve growth factor signaling in living cells. Using this assay, we will begin to identify the subcellular sites and cell types in which nerve growth factor signaling is normally initiated and how this initiates discrete signals. By combining this assay with our molecular insight gained in the first part of this proposal, we should be able to define the activity of cdk5 in an independent manner, and will be able to understand the importance of kinase activity in the regulation of nerve growth factor signaling. -3.76 648931e174

A: I use the below, which should at least let you fix the issues with the SAi Flexisign. It downloads and installs the version you need, and then installs the.exe based on what you select, but the.exe that it downloads and installs will be the previous version. I use it in place of the file it downloads from SAi's page, since it will always be up-to-date, and even has an updater if you need it to check for updates. Also note that if you select Direct Install, it will keep the old version of the.exe, and create a new one that is older (but the version that is newer will be the one that I download). So if you delete that old.exe, you may have to do it again. So I would recommend not using Direct Install, unless you are careful not to close or delete the older version before continuing. If you close it, and try to open it again, it will generate a new version, and is not left open. Q: How to get the value of clicked element in jquery? I want to get the value of clicked element in jquery. I used following code to write this function: $('.a').click(function() { var id = $(this).attr('id'); }); But it's not working for me, not getting any alert message, not getting any error message too. A: Try this, this will return true or false as per your condition. $('.a').click(function() { var id = $(this).attr('id'); if(id) alert(id); }); A: In your code var id = $(this).attr('id'); it's just that the attribute id isn't a variable. This is what you could do var id = this.id; But maybe it's better to use class and not id, and then you can use, using class selectors $('.a').click(function() { var id = $(this).attr('class'); }); or if you want, you could use: var id = $(this).attr('id'); But if you just want the id, then using var id = $(this).attr('id'); is fine, because when you
