web2read Sailing Manual Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Elliott, 1st Baronet, KCB, PC (1703 - 1771) was an officer of the British Royal Navy. He was born on the Isle of Wight, and attended the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth, (now the University of Portsmouth). He was made Commanding Officer of the 40-gun ship, and of the 10-gun. He went on to be Third Captain of the 100-gun, Captain of the 80-gun, Captain of the 90-gun and of the 50-gun. Finally, he was made Captain of the 60-gun in 1745 and was made Second in Command of the Jamaica Squadron in 1748. He went on to be Commander-in-Chief, Jamaica, and then Governor of Jamaica. The Marquess of Worcester was the Governor of Jamaica from 1748 to 1749. As Worcester was also a wealthy landowner, he felt that he was due a baronetcy. The Lords of the Treasury, however, recommended that Elliott, instead, should be granted the baronetcy of Elliott. This recommendation was acceded to by the king in 1750. Elliott then accepted the somewhat paltry post of Governor of Minorca. Elliott married Anne Gunning in 1735, and she bore him seven children, four of whom survived him, two sons and two daughters. His eldest son was William, who also became a British naval officer. At the age of 68, he died at his London home, Bedford Square.
