Tens of thousands of lives were lost and millions of lives were affected. This year saw a world that came to terms with all that is wrong in our world: social inequality, sexual harassment, refugee crises, nuclear war and climate change - and we saw the beginnings of change. Read on to understand some of the major trends in business for 2018. THE CORE CONSUMER READY FOR A CHANGE The core consumer was fuelled by the idea that anything was possible and they were willing to try new things. The world came together to see who could be the most inclusive, sustainable, ethical, fun and inclusive of them all. We met in huge crowds, crammed into venues, and stood in lines. And we showed the world that we can all change the world and make it better by being better. THE FEAR OF FAILING The failure of the previous decade, of the last 5 years, of the last 10 years – and especially the possibility of failing within the next 5-10 years, suddenly became very real. The sense of powerlessness that was there in 2018 was exceptional. THE FEAR OF LOSING POWER As the world shook in fear, we saw a rise in the call for some power to be returned to the people. It was not a call to sovereignty, but instead a call to power where we are all given the power to choose and make our own life and the lives of our fellow human beings. THE VIRAL GENRES As the world shook, the most exciting change was the rise of the new-age 'viral' genre. These people wanted to use their power and mediums to create radical change to make the world a better place. THE NEW INDUSTRY We saw the birth of a new group of people who are going to be leading the future of industry. This is a younger generation coming in - sharing more about passion and purpose than the previous generation.
